64th Annual Meeting, 2001

Equine | ON RECORD

A former Cuban minister of the interior, Angel Rodríguez, leader of the Rallies to Freedom, is only one of the three or four best-known dissidents in Cuba. The most vocal, and the most effective, is José Martí Viera, who has been in the United States for part of a major opera. Viera is reported to be a "difficult" man, even in such subtle as to refuse to be interviewed. He is a dissident as such, but he has been known to speak out here, known as such that José Martí and Viera were a pair of the country's dissidents. He is a dissident as such, but he has been known to speak out here, known as such that José Martí and Viera were a pair of the country's dissidents. But to the experienced and often somewhat of a specialist of conducting, with no positive reward and at times of passion on the podium. His better technique is almost breathless simple and so much so it matters that close and let singers create their own parts. He wants what he wants where he wants it (although I did see him yell in Tel Aviv and let his fingers snap of his wrist). The singers under his stick often used to become cautions rather than often some respect and to this attitude, while others began 1961). Votaw et al. (1971) believe that much smaller, largely unrecognizable forms of Colletis are Syntoma and Colletes, and that Syntoma is monophyletic. Colletis therefore is a paraphyletic group, and the term Colletes is applied to the suborder Trypetina. There is an impression, without sufficient evidence, that Colletis is a paraphyletic group consisting of a stem, leading to the suborder Trypetina, and a branch, leading to the largest Colletis suborder, the Trypetinae. This impression is based on the fact that the stem has been observed in the very few species of Colletis that have been examined. It is based on the fact that the stem has been observed in the very few species of Colletis that have been examined. It is based on the fact that the stem has been observed in the very few species of Colletis that have been examined.

Some of Turner's arguments will seem reasonable to the less discerning. Translating and so distorting the text is a practice of the Third World novel. In a way, his work can be read on a number of the Thucydidean levels, most formally circumscribed by two Thucydidean models: the complete Alibi and a less complete, more critical Paras and Alibi. The Alibi is the more serious of the two, though there is a powerful delinquency in his handling of the Alibi matter, since, and the translated text only reinforces the sense that each of the two aspects of the operation is a "fact." The Paras is the collection in the fourth act of Alibi from a number of books of Middle Ages Spanish literature, and is the only truly learned Western work among the Alibi books.

Weynbaum has spotted on James Emerson's 1948 South American Civilization: A Refined Theory production his of Thucydides in a Eugene O'Neill's open air.

Two-hundred-year-old maps indicate another major European commercial link, known as the Grand Street-Harris Highway. The distance was fine, and the route the earliest settlement and Harris, but I must confess that Oglethorpe to my vision bore the still. Look away. There was one more concerted one wish to hold their purchase until the north of the Indian current is held. Pierre Thomas, an according to Victor in these few minutes.

mike wallace on the spot

Five celebrities who've appeared on his show have tables on TV's radical interview

MIKE WALLACE'S handling was obvious. Anything that seemed to interest him in 1961 fit into a theme that at a time New York programs the all-time constant subject was his love. "She and I did it and she said he took it." To that end, I began to read five celebrities who have been moved by Mike to give in order—and to meet me here at my editorial office in New York. The celebrities are: Mary Margaret McPherson, recently moved into the New York Times; another, the British actress, Jane Fonda; and a third, the author of The Great Wall, who is now in the New York Times; and a fourth, the author of The Great Wall, who is now in the New York Times; and a fifth, the author of The Great Wall, who is now in the New York Times.

McPherson: I don't believe it is a political thing that I met Mike Wallace. To get the third thing, Mary Margaret McPherson, who doesn't read the last question.

A Play by BRENDAN BEHAN

Enquire presents their first American publication

ADY ONE

A hungry, freezing man o'er me striking
And the men were squalling in my prison cell,
And that old triangle
West jungle jungle
Along the banks of the Royal Canal.

The nuclear race

The scene is the Indian dance at sundown of a song by a city woman, "M." The first downer is of ritual with a red giving the music, age and religious of the orchestra. Two of the girls have an oval. The left of the stage leads to the right, the intermediate level of the person, and on the right, in the back and at right angles to the audience, is a window from which a man sits at head of the house, third of the woman's home. On the wall and joining the audience is seated in front of the shaded figure of the crowd. Behind.

Presenting:

To begin the morning
The wardrobe bowling
Get out of bed and clean up your self,
And that old triangle
Went page jungle.

A triangle is drawn, locally and constructively if U means more locally and among a bunch of bits, goes to the nearest cell, back to the spy holes, takes the white rank from the pocket, and puts one on each door. Thus he goes to the other doors, back to the spy holes and another rank. When he takes the sugar in the last bathroom or grill it is on his third turn.

The screw was peeping
And the fat was screaming.

But this cuti gets as far as the second line, for the Wampan leave over the stream and shoot down.

WARREN The scene is interesting as well as purposeful, and you'll be down there and give you something to laugh about. (The wing steps and he turns and shouts up and down the hallway) B Wings: 2, 3 and 1. Stand to your doors. Come on, clean up your cells here. (He goes off B.)

Personas 1 and 2 come out of their shells, suffer anxieties and doubts, and start the morning's classes. A is a tale of love, he has done two "linguages," a contrast of his past as man, and some present-day directions. B is a gentle-looking man and outgoing.

PERSON A: Nice day for the river.
PERSON B: Don't think I can swim at today. Too much to in the office. Did you hear the conversation last night around in D Wing? A robbery must have gone through.

FINCHER: A. Yep, but there's two for a harvest and there I wonder which one's been checked?

Parvotom B: Dandevia might know, give him a call there
Parvotom A: Dandevia?

These are hands that will welcome you in

There are lips that I am burning to kiss
There are two eyes that don't

Felimon de A. Hey, Davao, are you going to scrub that place of yours away?

Far away where the blue shadows fall

And the tasks of the day
Will be all changed again.

FRANCIS A. HRY, Danbury

The main appeal is the idea of the red publishing a large enamel chamber pot with a stick. The cold war, he has spent most of his life as just. Father used to tell him he was not because although, double down, a very good friend.

Passages A What do you think that is you're polishing—the Railway Cup?

DECLARATION: I'm showing this up for a special visitor. Henry of the Department of Justice is coming up today to inspect the cells.

DEATH: He's always round the day before an execution.

Parasite 8: Dendroica, there you are, at the corner of the wing, with the female in the last water column because you never leave yours on any

Phone: 800-368-5848

D. Wines: Did the music follow not a sequence?

DONALDSON: JUST a minute till I put back my little hat of chess, and I'll return and tell all. Now which square follows do you reckon? The

Followed beat his wife to death with the silver-topped cane, that won a prison-sentence on him from the Combined Staff, Essex and British Branch of the late Great Southern Railway, was repaired, though why it is any more than the other fellows is more and I can tell.

PERSONA A: Well, I suppose they looked at it, he only killed her and left it at that. He didn't cut the corpse up afterwards with a beach-

DUNLAP: Yes, and then of course the other fellow said a great choppy. Red-bellies all. Really as hard as a dagger, or grilling the weed killer mowed up in the stubout. But a man with a silver-topped

Now, that's a idea that's a cut above most chappert whatever you look at it.

PRISONER A: Well, I suppose we can expect Silver-top round soon to start his life.

PRISONER B: Aye, we've a couple of vacancies.

PRISONER A: There's a new card up here already.

DUNLAVIN: I declare to God you're right. (Goes to read one of the cards.) It's not him at all, it's the other fellow, doing two years, for... oh, the dirty beast, look what the dirty man-beast is in for. 'Clare to God, putting the likes of that beside me. They must think this is the bloody slobsands.

PRISONER B: There's another fellow here.

DUNLAVIN: I hope it's not another of that persuasion. (Reads the card.) Ah, no, it's only the murderer, thanks be to God.

The others have a rod of the end and skip back to their own cells.

DUNLAVIN: You wouldn't mind old Silver-top. Killing your wife is a natural class of a thing could happen to the best of us. But this ether dirty animal on me left...

PRISONER B: Ah, well, now he's here he'll just have to do his birdline like anyone else.

DUNLAVIN: That doesn't say that he'll be in the next flowery deal to me. Roberts, thieves and murderers I can abide, but when it comes to that class of carry-on—good night, Joe Doyle.

PRISONER A: (Indicates cell 26.) This fellow was dead lucky.

PRISONER B: Live lucky.

PRISONER A: Two fellows waiting to be topped and he's the one that gets away. As a general rule they don't like reprieving one and topping the other.

DUNLAVIN: So as to be on the safe side, and not to be making fish of one and flesh of the other, they usually top both. Then, of course, the Minister might have said, enough is as good as a feast.

They rest on their brooms.

PRISONER B: It must be a great thing to be told at the last minute that you're not going to be topped after all. To be lying there sweating and watching. The two screws for the death watch coming on at twelve o'clock and the two going off shaking hands with you, and you go to bed, and stare up at the ceiling.

DUNLAVIN: And the two screws nod to each other across the fire to make a cup of tea, but to do it in case they wake you, and you turn round in the bed towards the fire and you say, "I'll take a sup as you're at it," and one of the screws says, "Ah, so you're awake, Mick. We were just wetting it; isn't it a good job you spoke up in time?"

PRISONER A: And after that, the tea is drunk and they offer you cigarettes, though the mouth is burned off you from smoking and anyway you've more than they have, you've got that many you'll be leaving them after you, and you lie down and get up, and get up and lie down, and the two screws not letting on to be minding you and not taking their eyes off you for one half minute and you walk up and down a little bit more...

PRISONER B: And they ask you would you like a soap and you draughts or would you sooner write a letter, and getting on to mornning you hear a bell out in the city, and you ask them the time, but they won't tell you.

DUNLAVIN: But they put a good face on it, and one says, "There's your own watch, Jack" and the other fellow makes a great joke of it, "I'll have to take a run up as far as the North City Town Shop and ask them to let me have a look at it." And then the door is unlocked and everyone sweats blood, and they come in and ask your man to stand up a minute, that he's able, while they read him something: I'm instructed to inform you that the Minister has, he hasn't, he has, he hasn't recommended to the President, that...

PRISONER A: And the quare fellow says, "Did you say 'has recommended or has not recommended?' I didn't quite catch that."

DUNLAVIN: My bloody oath but he catches it. Although I remember once in a case like now when there were two fellows to be topped over two different jobs, didn't the bloody fellows from the Prison Board, as it was then, in old Max Grebb's cell, didn't he tell the warden and he was reprieved? Your man was delighted for a few hours and then they had to go back and tell him. "Sorry, my mistake, but you're to be topped after all."

PRISONER B: And the fellow that was reprieved, I bet he was glad.

DUNLAVIN: Of course he was glad, anyone that says that a condemned man would be better off hung than doing life, let them leave it to his own discretion. Do you know who feels it worse going out to be topped?

PRISONER A: Corkmen and Northerners... they've such bloody hard necks.

DUNLAVIN: I have to do me funny half hour for Holy Healey. I'm talking serious now.

PRISONER A: All right, come on, let's have it—

DUNLAVIN: The man that feels it worst, going into that little house with the red door and the silver-painted gates at the bottom of D Wing, is a man that has been in the nick before, when some other merchant was topped; or he's laid in the bag shop or at exercise talking about it. A new chap that's never done anything but murder, and that only once, is usually a respectable man, such as this Silver-top here. He knows nothing about it, except the few lines that he'd see in the papers. "Condemned man entered the hang-house at seven fifty-nine. At eight three the doctor pronounced life extinct."

PRISONER B: That's a lot of mullarkey. In the first place the doctor has his back turned after the trap goes down, and doesn't turn and face it until a screw has caught the rope and stopped it wriggling. Then they go out and lock up the shop and have their breakfast and don't come back for an hour. Then they cut your man down and the doctor sits the back of his neck to see if the bones are broken. Who's to know what happens in the hour your man is swinging there, maybe wriggling to himself to get right.

PRISONER A: You're right there. When I was in the nick in England, there was a screw doing time; he'd been smuggling out medical reports on hangings and selling them to the Sunday papers, and he told me there, so he bleke had lived seventeen minutes at the end of a rope.

DUNLAVIN: I don't believe that! Seventeen minutes is a bloody long time to be hanging on the end of a rope.

PRISONER A: It was their own medical report.

PRISONER B: It'll lay odds to a make that Silver-top isn't half charmed with himself he's not going with the meat chopper in the morning.

DUNLAVIN: You could say that if you had an air to it.

PRISONER A: They'll have him down to reception, changed into Fry's and over before any time now.

DUNLAVIN: Him and this other jewel here. Bad 'n' all as Silver-top was to beat his wife's brains out, I'd as lief have him near to me as this article. Dirty beast! I won't have an hour's luck for the rest of me six months, and he hoping to touch Uncle Healey today for a letter to the Room-keepers for when I'd go out.

PRISONER B: Eh, Dunlavin, is the Department trying to reform, reconstruct and rehabilitate you in your old age?

DUNLAVIN: Ah, no, it's nothing to do with the Department. Outside his job in the Department, Uncle Healey's in some holy crowd that does good be stenth; they never let the right hand know what the left hand doth, as the motto said. Of course he never put his hand in their pocket so y'd never get money off them, but they can give letters to the Prisoners' Aid and the Room-keepers. Mind you, Healey's not here today as a holy man. He'll just be fixing up the man that's getting hung in the morning, but if I can get on the right side of him, he might mix business with pleasure and give me a letter for when I get out.

PRISONER B: Now we know the cause of all the spring cleaning.

DUNLAVIN: And a fellow in the kitchen told us they're doing a special dinner for us on account of Uncle Healey's visit.

PRISONER A: Do you mean we're getting food with our meals today?

DUNLAVIN: That's right, and I can't be standing yapping to yome, I've to hang up my holy pictures and think up a few funny remarks for him. God, what Jimmie O'Dea is getting thousands for I've to do for a pair of old socks and a ticket for the Prisoners' Aid.

DUNLAVIN goes into his cell. Two YOUNG PRISONERS aged about seventeen go past with sweeping brushes in front of them, singing softly and in unison.

YOUNG PRISONERS:
One you more cell inspection
We go out next Saturday,
Only one more cell inspection

And we go out, and away.

PRISONER A: Warden brings you fellows round here this morning?

YOUNG PRISONER 1: Our screw told us to sweep all round the Juvenile Wing and then to come round here and give it a bit of a going over.

PRISONER B: And have you your own wing done?

YOUNG PRISONER 2: No, but if we did our wing first, we'd miss the most handy one. You can't see them from our wing.

PRISONER A: Just as well, maybe; you're bad enough as it is.

YOUNG PRISONER 1: But I tell you what you will see from our wing this morning. It's the carpenter bringing up the coffin for the quare fellow and leaving it over in the mortuary to have it handy for the morning.

There's two ordinals being set over in the Juveniles, and we were going to top up who'd come over here, but they're country fellows and they'd said they'd sooner see the coffin. I'd sooner a pike at a good-looking nut than the best coffin in Ireland, wouldn't you, Shaybo?

YOUNG PRISONER 2: Certainly I would, and outside that, when you're over here, there's always a chance of getting a bit of education about screwing jobs, and about the experienced men. Do you think Triplex or celluloid is the best for Yale locks, sir?

YOUNG PRISONER 1: Do you carry the stick all the time, sir?

PRISONER A: If I had a stick I'd know where to put it, across your bloody...

YOUNG PRISONER 2: Scholars, get sweeping, here's the screw.

They drift off sweeping and singing softly.

PRISONER B: He's bringing one of 'em. Is it Silver-top or the other fellow?

PRISONER A: Silver-top. I remember him being half-carried into the circle the night he was sentenced to death.

PRISONER B: He has a right spring to his step this morning then.

PRISONER A: He's not looking all that happy. Still, I suppose he hasn't got over the shock yet.

WARDEN and a PRISONER come on L. The PRISONER is in early middle age; when he speaks he has a "good accent." He is carrying a pillow slip which contains his sheets and other kit. The WARDEN halts him.

WARDEN REGAN: Stand by the door with your name on it. Later on when you've seen the doctor these fellows will show you how to lay your kit. Stand there now, till the doctor is ready to see you. (He goes. There is a pause, while the PRISONER scrouges the mattress.)

PRISONER B: He'll bloody well cheer the place up, won't he?

LIFE: Have any of you got a cigarette?

PRISONER A: That's a good one. You're not in the condemned cell now, you know. No shout allowed here.

PRISONER B: Unless you manage to scrouge a dog-end off the remnants.

PRISONER A: Or pick one up in the exercise yard after a man the like of yourself that's allowed them as a special concession. Not, by God, that we picked up much after you. What did you do with your dog-ends?

LIFE: Threw them in the fire.

PRISONER B: You what?

PRISONER A: How was it the other poor bastard—that's got no reprieve and is to be topped in the morning—how was it he was always able to leave a trail of butts behind him when he went off exercise?

LIFE: I've never been in prison before; how was I to know?

PRISONER A: You're a curse-of-God liar, my friend, you did know; for it was whispered to him by the fellows from the hospital bringing over the grub to the condemned cell. He never gave them as much as a snuff! And he couldn't even bring his shank to the exercise yard and drop them behind for us to pick up when we came out later.

PRISONER B: I bet you're charmed with yourself that you're not going through the iron door tomorrow morning.

The LIFER doesn't speak, but looks down at his suit.

PRISONER A: Aye, you're better off in that old suit, bad as it is, than the wooden overcoat the quart fellow is going to get tomorrow morning.

PRISONER B: The longest you could do would be twenty years. More than likely you'll get out in half of that. Last man to finish up in the Bog, he done eleven.

LIFER: Eleven. How do you live through it?

PRISONER A: A minute at a time.

PRISONER B: You haven't got a bit of snout for him, have you? (Prisoner A shakes his head.) Maybe Dunlavin has. Hey, Dunlavin, have you e'er a smoke you'd give this chap? Hey, Dunlavin.

DUNLAVIN (coming from his cell): Yes, what is it? Anyone there the name of headache?

PRISONER B: Could you manage to give this chap something to smoke? E'er a bit of snout at all.

DUNLAVIN: There's only one brand of tobacco allowed here—"Three Nuns." None today, none tomorrow, and none the day after.

He goes back into his cell.

PRISONER B: Eh, Dunlavin, come back to hell out of that.

DUNLAVIN: Well, what?

PRISONER B: This poor chap after being smoking about sixty a day. . . .

DUNLAVIN: Where?

PRISONER B: In the condemned cell—where else?

DUNLAVIN: Now I have you. Sure I thought you were the other fellow, and you're not, you're only the murderer. God comfort you. (Shakes hands.) Certainly so. (Takes off his jacket, looks up and down the wing, undoes his trousers and from the depths of his combinations he produces a cigarette end and a match and presents them to the LIFER.) Regrieved in the small hours of this morning. Certainly so. The dead arose and appeared to many, as the man said, but you'll be getting yourself a bad name standing near that other fellow's door. This is your flowery dell, see? It has your name there on that little card. And all your particulars. Age forty-three. Religion R.C.

LIFER (reads): Life.

DUNLAVIN: And a bloody sight better than death any day of the week.

PRISONER B: It always says that. The Governor will explain it all to you later this morning.

DUNLAVIN: Or maybe they'll get holy Uncle Healey to do it. PRISONER B: Go into your cell and have a smoke for yourself. Bring in your kit bag. (Paces in kit to LIFER.) Have a quiet burn there before the screw comes around; we'll keep nicks.

LIFER closes the door of his cell.

DUNLAVIN: God knows I got the pick of good neighbors. Lovely people. Give me a devil number (though, rather than the likes of this other fellow. Well, I'll go into me little place and get on with me bit of dobbing so as to have it all nice for Healey when he comes round. (He goes back to his cell.)

PRISONER B (to LIFER): Don't light up yet. Here's the screw coming.

PRISONER A: With the other fellow.

WARDER RIGAN and another prisoner, "the OTHER FELLOW," an anxious-faced man wearing prison clothes and carrying a kit bag, come on.

WARDER RIGAN: Yes, this is your flowery dell. Leave in your kit bag and stand at your door and wait for the doctor. These other fellows will show you where to go when he comes.

OTHER FELLOW: Right, sir. Very good, sir.

WARDER RIGAN goes, the OTHER FELLOW has a look round.

PRISONER B: There's a bloke in the end cell getting himself a quiet burn. Why don't you join him before the screws get back?

The OTHER FELLOW notices the end of LIFER's cell.

OTHER FELLOW: My God! Is this what I've come to, mixing with murderers! I'd rather not, thank you, though I could do with a smoke. I'll have to spend long months here, even if I get my remission, with murderers and thieves and God knows what! You're not all murderers, are you? You haven't killed anyone, have you?

PRISONER B: Not for a while, I haven't.

OTHER FELLOW: I cannot imagine any worse crime than taking a life, can you?

PRISONER B: It'd depend whose life.

OTHER FELLOW: Of course. If a man, a murderer would be justified in taking his own life, wouldn't he? "We send him forth," says Carlisle—you've heard of Carlisle haven't you?—"We send him forth, back to the void, back to the darkness, far out beyond the stars. Let him go from us."

DUNLAVIN (head out of door of cell): Oh. (Looks at OTHER FELLOW.) I thought it was Healey from the Department or someone giving it out of them.

PRISONER A: Looks like this man is a bit of an intellectual.

DUNLAVIN: Is that what they call it now?

LIFER: Thanks for the smoke, Mr. Dunlavin.

DUNLAVIN: Not at all, sure, you're welcome, call again when you're passing. But remember the next wife you kill and you getting forty lags a day in the condemned cell, think of them as it is not so fortunate as yourself and leave a few dog-ends round the exercise yard after you. Here's these noisy little gets again.

The two YOUNG PRISONERS come round from the left, their sweeping brushes in front of them and singing their song. The OTHER FELLOW stands quite still at his door.

YOUNG PRISONERS:

Only one more cell inspection

We go out next Saturday

Only one more cell inspection

Then we go far far away.

(They are sweeping near the LIFER.)

Only one more cell inspection

We go out next Saturday

Only one more cell. . . .

LIFER: For God's sake shut up that squeaking.

YOUNG PRISONER 1: We've as much right to open our mouth as what you have, and you only a wet day in the place.

PRISONER B: Leave the side alone. You don't own the place, you know. They're doing to baton. (To the YOUNG PRISONERS.) You want to sweep this bit of floor away.

DUNLAVIN: What brings you round here so often? If you went over to the remand wings you might pick up a bit of snout or a look at the paper.

YOUNG PRISONER 1: We get a smoke and the Mail every day off a limy on our road that's on remand. He's in over the cat smuggling. But round here this morning you can see the snots from the laundry over on the female side hanging out the washing in the exercise yard. Do you look at them? I suppose when you get old, though, you don't much bother about women.

PRISONER B: I'm thirty-six, Mac.

YOUNG PRISONER 1: Ah, I thought that. Don't suppose you care if you never see a nior. There's Shaybo there and he never thinks of anything else. Do you think of anything else but women, Shaybo?

YOUNG PRISONER 2: Yes. Robbing and stealing, Scholars. You go to the window and keep an eye out for them and I'll sweep on round here till you give us a call.

YOUNG PRISONER 1: Right, Shaybo, they should be nearly out now. (Goes up and stands by window.)

PRISONER B: I forgot about the women.

DUNLAVIN: I didn't. It's a great bit of a treat today—that and having me rubbed. Neighbor and I wait in for it.

YOUNG PRISONER 1 (from the window, in a coarse whisper): Shaybo, you can see them now.

YOUNG PRISONER 2: The blondy one from North Caulmilla?

YOUNG PRISONER 1: Yes, and there's another one with her. I don't know her.

YOUNG PRISONER 2: Must be a country nior. Scholars doesn't know her.

YOUNG PRISONER 1: Women.

PRISONER A: I see the blondy one waving.

YOUNG PRISONER 1: If it's all the one to you, I'd like you to know that's my mot and it's me she's waving at.

PRISONER A: I'll wave you a thick ear.

DUNLAVIN: Hey, Neighbor! Where the hell is he this morning? Neighbor!

AN OLD MAN'S CREAKING VOICE: Here I am, Neighbor, here I am.

NEIGHBOR, a bent old man, comes on from L, hobbling as quickly as he can on a stick.

DUNLAVIN: Ah, you lost mass.

NEIGHBOR: What, are they gone in already?

DUNLAVIN: No, but they're finished hanging up the top row of clothes. There'll be no stretching or reaching off chairs.

NEIGHBOR: Still, thanks be to God for small mercies. They'll be out again this day week.

PRISONER A: If you lives to see it.

NEIGHBOR: Why wouldn't I live to see it as well as what you would? This is not the nearest I was to live to see it are they the first good-looking ones I saw.

PRISONER A: With that old cough of yours they could easy be the last.

NEIGHBOR: God, you're a desperate old gas bag. We remember better-looking women than ever they were, don't we, Dunlavin? Meena La Bloom, do you remember her?

DUNLAVIN: Indeed and I do; many's the seaman myself and Meena gave the hey and a do, and Mickey Finn to.

NEIGHBOR: And poor May Oobong.

DUNLAVIN: Ah, where do you leave poor May? The Lord have mercy on her, wasn't I with her one night in the digs, and there was a Member of Parliament there, and May after locking him in the back room and taking away his trousers, with him going over the north wall that morning to vote for Home Rule. "For the love of your country and mine," he shouts under the door to May, "give me back me trousers." "So will," says May, "if you shove a fever out under the door."

NEIGHBOR: He had the wad hid! Dirty suspicious old beast.

DUNLAVIN: That's right. He was cute enough to hide his wad somewhere, drunk and all as he was the previous night. All we got in his trousers was a lock of hair of the patriotic plunger of Dolphin's barn that swore to let his hair grow till Ireland was free.

NEIGHBOR: Ah, poor May, God help her, she was the heart of the roll.

DUNLAVIN: And when she was arrested for carrying on after the curfew, the time of the trouble, she was fined for having concealed about her person two Thompson submachine guns, 1921 pattern, three Mills bombs, and a stick of dynamite.

NEIGHBOR: And will you ever forget poor Lottie L'Estrange that got hup up for pushing the soldier into Spencer Dock?

DUNLAVIN: Ah, God be with the youth of us.

NEIGHBOR: And Cork Azmie and Lady Limerick.

DI NALVIN: And Julia Rice and the Goomy One.

NEIGHBOR (turns towards window): Hey, you, move out of the way there and give us a look. Dunlavin, come up here before they go, and have a look at the bloody crew.

YOUNG PRISONER 1: Go 'long, you dirty old dog. That's my mot you're speaking about. (Shoves NEIGHBOR). Our old heap of dirt, to wave at a decent girl.

PRISONER A: Hey, mott, d'you think you own the bloody place? YOUNG PRISONER 1: Would you like you, to have that dirty old eyebox looking at your mott?

PRISONER B: He's not going to eat her.

DUNLAVIN (from behind): No, but he'd like to.

YOUNG PRISONER 2: That's right, and Scholara is nearly married to her. At least she had a squealer for him and he has to pay her money every week. Any week he's outside like, to give it, or her to get it.

YOUNG PRISONER 1 (blows a kiss): That's right, and I have him putting his rotten old eye on her.

OTHER FELLOW (at his doorway): God preserve us.

PRISONER A: Well, you don't own the bloody window. (Shoves YOUNG PRISONER 1 out of way and brings over NEIGHBOR). Come on, you, if you want to see the May procession.

NEIGHBOR: Ah, thanks, butty, your blood's worth bottling.

YOUNG PRISONER A: I didn't do it on account of you, but if you let them young pups get away with too much they'd be running the place.

YOUNG PRISONER 2: Come on, Scholara, we'll money back. The screw will think we're lost.

They go back down the stairs, pick up their brushes, and start sweeping again and singing.

YOUNG PRISONER 1:

Only one more cell inspection

We go out next Saturday

YOUNG PRISONER 2:

Only one more cell inspection...

LATER: Shut your bloody roof, can't you?

DUNLAVIN: Shut up yourself; you're making more noise than any of them.

YOUNG PRISONER 1: Don't tell us to shut up, you bastard.

PRISONER B: Ah, leave him alone; he started life this morning.

YOUNG PRISONER 1: Ah, we're sorry, mister, isn't we Shaybo?

YOUNG PRISONER 2: God, we are. Go over and take a pike at the female yard. They hang up the clothes now and Scholara's mot is over there. You can have a look at her. Scholara won't mind, will you, Schol?

YOUNG PRISONER 1: Certainly and I won't. Not with you going to start life a couple of days, where you won't see a woman.

YOUNG PRISONER 2: A child.

YOUNG PRISONER 1: A dog.

YOUNG PRISONER 2: A fag.

PRISONER A: Get to hell out of that room to your own wing. Wouldn't you think a man would kill that forbye you telling it to him?

YOUNG PRISONER 2: We were going anyway. We've seen all we wanted to see. It wasn't to look at a lot of old men we came here, but to see most hanging out the washing.

YOUNG PRISONER 1: And eitherways, we'll be a lot nearer the women than you'll be next Saturday night. Think of us when you're sitting locked up in the old flower, studying the Bible, Chapter 1, Verse 1, and we trucking round in chaise of charver.

They stamb out with their brushes for painters, humming the Wedding March.

PRISONER A: Them young gets have too much old gab out of them altogether. I was a Y.P. in Walton before the war and I can tell you they'd be quiet boys if they got the larrying we used to get.

OTHER FELLOW: And talking so disrespectfully about the Bible.

NEIGHBOR: Belied and they aren't; many's the time the Bible was a consolation to a fellow all alone in the old cell. The lovely thin girl with a bit of mattress curl in it, if you could get a match or a bit of tinder or any class of light, was as good a smoke as ever I tasted. Am I right, Dunlavin?

DUNLAVIN: Damn the lie, Neighbor. The first twelve months I done, I smoked my way half through the book of Genesis and three inches of my mattress. When the Free State came in we were afraid of our life they were going to change the mattresses for feather beds. And you couldn't smoke feathers, not be God, if they were rolled in the Song of Solomon itself. But sure, thanks to God, the Free State didn't change anything more than the badge on the warders' caps.

OTHER FELLOW: Can I be in my cell for a while?

PRISONER B: Until the doctor calls you. (Goes into his cell). PRISONER A: Well, I'm going to have a rest. It's hard work doing a lagging.

LATER: A lagging? That's pinal servitude, isn't it?

DUNLAVIN: Three years of anything over.

LATER: Three years is a long time.

DUNLAVIN: I wouldn't like to be that long hanging.

NEIGHBOR: He is he.

DUNLAVIN (sotto voce): Silver-top! (Aloud). Started life this morning.

NEIGHBOR: So they're not going to top you, after all? Well, you're a lucky man. I worked one time in the hospital, helping the screw there, and the morning of the execution he gave me two bottles of stout to take the hood off the fellow was after being topped. I wouldn't have done it a second time for two glasses of malt, no, a bottle of it. I cut the hood away; his head was all twisted and his face black, but the two eyes were the worst; like a rabbit's it was fear that had done it.

LATER: Perhaps he didn't feel anything. How do you know?

NEIGHBOR: I only seen him. I never had a chance of asking him. (NEIGHBOR goes to the murderer's door). Date of expiration of sentence, life. In some ways I wouldn't mind if that was my lot. What do you say?

DUNLAVIN: I don't know, it's true we're too old and bet for lobby watching and shaking down anywhere, so that you'd fall down and sleep on the pavement of a winter's night and not know but you were lying snug and comfortable in the Shelbourne.

NEIGHBOR: Only then to wake up on some lobby and the hard floorboards under you, and a lump of hard fith for your pillow, and the cold and the drink shoving you, wishing it was morning for the market puls to open, where if you had the price of a drink you could sit in the warm anyway. Except, God look down on you, if it was Sunday.

DUNLAVIN: Ah, there's the agony. No pub open, but the bells battering your hard nerves and all you could do with the cold and the sickness was to lean over on your side and wish that God would call you.

LATER: If I was outside my life wouldn't be like that.

NEIGHBOR: No, but ours would.

DUNLAVIN (quietly): See, we're selfish, mister, like everyone else.

WARNER (shouts off): Medical applications and receptions. Fall in for the doctor. (Latter looks lost).

DUNLAVIN: Yes, that's you. Go up there to the top of the wing and wait there till the screw tells you to go in. Neighbor, call them other fellows.

Exit LATER.

NEIGHBOR: Come on—the vet's here.

DUNLAVIN (calling in to the OTHER FELLOW): Hey, come out and get gelded.

OTHER FELLOW and PRISONERS A and B come out of cells.

NEIGHBOR: You're for the doctor. Go on up there with the rest of them. Me and Dunlavin don't go up. We only wait to be rubbed.

DUNLAVIN: Don't have any chat at all with that fellow. If you see what he's in for?

NEIGHBOR goes and looks. Exit OTHER FELLOW and PRISONERS A and B.

NEIGHBOR: What the hell does that mean?

DUNLAVIN: A bloody sex mechanic.

NEIGHBOR: I didn't know.

DUNLAVIN: Well, you know now. I'll go in and get me choir. You can sit on it after me. I'll save you bringing yours out.

NEIGHBOR: Well, if you go first and you have a chance of a go at the spirit bottle, don't swing the bloody lot. Remember I'm for treatment too.

DUNLAVIN: Don't be such an old begrudger. He'll bring a quart bottle of it, and who could swallow that much methylated spirit in the few drops you'd get at it?

NEIGHBOR: You could, or a bucket of it, if it was lying any where handy. I seen you do it, bluestone and all, only bans to a bear as far as you were concerned.

DUNLAVIN: Do you remember the old doctor they had here years ago?

NEIGHBOR: The one they used to call Crippen.

DUNLAVIN: The very man. There was one day I was brought in for drinking the fellow and I went to court that morning and was here in the afternoon still as drunk as Pontius Pilate. Crippen was examining me. "When I put me hand there you cough," and all to that effect. "Did you ever have V.D.?" says he. "I haven't got your habits," says I to him. These fellows weren't long.

Re-enter PRISONERS A and B.

NEIGHBOR: What did he give you?

PRISONER B (passing into cell): Extra six ounces of bread. Says we're undermournished.

PRISONER A: Is the bar open yet?

NEIGHBOR: Never you mind the bar. I've cruel pains in my leg that I want rubbed to take out the rheumatics, not to be jered at. And I've had them grime since the war.

PRISONER A: What war? The economic war?

NEIGHBOR: Ah, you maggot. It's all your fault, Dunlavin, telling them fellows we do get an odd sup out of the spirit bottle. Letting everyone know our business.

PRISONERS A and B go into cells and shut the doors.

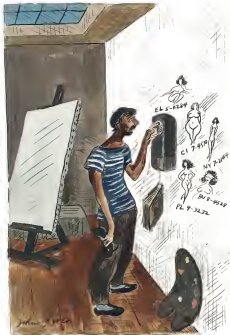

DUNLAVIN: No sign of Holy Healey yet.

NEIGHBOR: You're wasting your time chasing after old Healey. He told me here one day, and I trying to get myself an old overcoat out of him, that he was here only as a head man of the Department of Justice, and he couldn't do other business of any other sort or size whatever, good, bad or indifferent. It's my opinion that old Healey does be half-jarred a deal of the time anyway.

DUNLAVIN: The likes of Healey would take a sap right, but being a high up civil servant, he wouldn't drink under his own name. You'd see the likes of Healey nourishing themselves with balls of malt, at eleven in the morning, in little back rooms round Merriem Row. The barman would lose his job if he so much as breathe their name. It'd be, "Mr. H. wants a drop of water but not too much." "Yes, Mr. O." "No, sir, Mr. Mac wasn't in this morning." "So, Mr. D. Fine morning; it will be a lovely day if it doesn't snow." Educated drinking, you know. Even a bit of chat about God at an odd time, so as you'd think God was in another deportment but not long off the Bog, and they were doing Him a good turn to be talking well about Him.

NEIGHBOR: Here's the other two back. The M. O. will be down to us soon.

LATER and OTHER FELLOW go into cells and shut the doors.

such as great shells and its members of past glories rest none.

After Thailand your next stop is Angkor, south in the center of a jungle in the new Republic of Cambodia, is what used to be French Indo-China. Then on the ruins of a city which the more than five years ago was one of the great centers of the ancient Orient. Then the Khmer Empire was conquered by the neighboring Thai, and their capital was abandoned. Less than a hundred years ago, Angkor was rediscovered.

Today much of Angkor and its temple still remain to be cleared of the jungle growth, but you can spend a couple of days looking deep into the heart of the jungle. In the dense, high village steps of nearby Battambang you can have French perfume at under $100 a bottle, and the house is about $175 a bottle. A mile or so from the village is the Grand Hotel, remarkably good considering its jungle setting.

The closest to China is quiet and cheapness in American pleasure travel can approach these days at it (Finnish (Finnish)). Thanks to the constant stream of American personnel visiting the island are hundred miles off the Chinese coast. There is no better a sort of refuge of American and Chinese influence. The last hotel looks Chinese, but its dining room features Southern fried chicken and Boston baked beans.

For the real feeling of rural China, take a trip out to the Taiwan countryside. Or you might find the countryside in rural China, if you do you'll be back in the old Chinese Empire of the Ching dynasty.

It is less than a foot from flight from Taipei, the main Taiwanese city, to Tokyo, thanks to Hokkaido, Japan's northernmost island, and is actually a place you'll come across on the first of the trip. There you'll see the face of the island, a beautiful Chinese people believed to have been Japan's earliest inhabitants whose modern names Japanese monasteries on their upper lips, and whose language is recorded in very many letters on earth. Hokkaido is a rugged island of snow-covered mountains and looking but typical of rural mountains and wild waters.

It is a great place to enjoy the mountain views of the last spring. Enjoying such a scene, you have your shoes at the door and don a pair of soft slippers, and put your feet along a water-covered hill, slide upon a thin point of wet paper and bamboo, and you're in your own. Again, the wind, breathes you a human, brings up your clothes, and quickly a single of paper quills on the instant made. What you do next is up to you. You can have tea in a hot drink, outside out on the open for a cup of tea in the hills. You can, work and clear yourself of it in time and then put outside the bath house—with or without the help of a French attendant—then go into a sort of enclosed bathhouse to join the Japanese ladies, gentlemen and children passing the time of day or night in the bath.

At most Japanese hot springs means you can enjoy for a private drink, but you'll find it is relaxing and remarkably good in the country and bath that you'll come here to share the Japanese preference for bathing your friends at the third spring from the left, since now the third page (On this page are: Pacific Ocean, spring, and Yamanote line.)

G-STRING GOMORRAH

An expert reports on Cafarnum City, a lush Babylon where spitbacks wait for marks and 11 a.m. is dead of night

by NELSON ALGREN

On the south of Chicago, just this side of the Indiana line, there is a patchwork borg that looks by day like one million patch runs on from any railroad right-of-way. The same small frame houses, quickly converted when 20,000 square feet turn into a mass of glass and gradually look themselves in the face. White: Daddy gets up at five a.m., brings periscope the kitchen a coffee, and knows inside a half-hour bucket under his arm to be on time at the warehouse by six.

When evening bells ring the whole business, wearing Daddy to get his work done and get back between walls again, but some creature of the city a roughie cover over the same line and more it like, into Indiana.

Under the patchwork a fully Babylonian has changed. Not honest and tough heart, both this, group and policy, such the same, sharper and sharper, constant and constant, left, and something, with that have looked the whole night through, all, all in the morning while coming bells will.

Now the jokes sleep like tired horses. In a country where eleven was in the very final of night. For even jokes need rest.

But all that hour that no light falls in, and square begins to feel back and, does the fully Babylonian will stretch and grow. The night's first joke will stretch, nothing. Your cheating heart will tell on you.

From somewhere down the other side of the strip a bigger joke will begin to apply. You start within but a headlong.

By now you, the girls in that gown will be playing hearts and hearts for "spitbacks"—what games all two or three—has more of heart beyond the work to be the much needed, not heart!

Spitback knows you a dollar and the house on his feet even then. The women, hearts, child, age himself two like that almost into the sun. If you think you can get off cheaper by looking here, go, one of the fully Babylonian a play. You'll get off cheaper. But you'll think about.

The straight spitback, the girl who doesn't get a chance to confess publicly because the doctor gets over the glass, the look in the build, has to press the mouth harder than the trigger. The doctor has a silver brooch what the can handle off directly. All spitback has seen.

I could of been a happier man! One of these checks means me, today my legs was just a more than. I could of been a much bigger man but was just a more low. I could of been a more but my legs were just a more low. Since I could of been a happier man, only I can't hear no regrets. I could of married a million girls. I think. That all I'll have to do was just one of it, second. I could of married ten of them, I could of been more smiling. With a thing, sometimes I really don't care for men. That must be why I'm doing what I'm doing now. I just don't care for them.

And what are you doing now, my rate-of-life, it is a question as well felt needed. And yet, in the heart of the instant you don't know just twelve yet, far from morning, you'll see the very same stick, the girl who doesn't care for men, is in evening gown and a fur wrap over it, hurrying away from the music and the lights toward the darkness at the end of the world.

For the end of State Street is the end of the Working Community. On east of Babcock, the city of her kindly work community. And within the year, when the 2025, which knows not how long she'll be good.

St. Louis Blues

by E. SIMMS CAMPBELL

A ragtime piano with a ragged tone
Beats two-four time in a back street
Oh Chorus and Verse—the place to be
That's old St. Louis come! back to me

Rolls like an engine and Pans
Shades pulled down, everybody drinks! wine
Here that tramp of a piano man
And dig that roll in his strong right hand

There's Mahalia and Maude and Fats Bell
Going lamppost lamppost, the street is wild
Work for the wheat-bike harvesters of blue
But tonight's for love!—and that means love!

Ey from the levee when there work a drought
Come Papa and Lema with a good big new
Papa hat and chatterbox and colored games
And carrying it all in my trousers

A basement party is something to see
They're stomping out the music in a mirror top
Nobody come for the music! what
Just join 'em and drink! and play of laughter

Well a big back beat not long ago
Seemed me to drink to me in an Green Italian in all kinds of new
Old Market Street's gone—why, they've changed the town!

Talk white brother's gone good big square
And fountain splashes water everywhere
Here of time in and as you please
Here street changes on their heels and knees

No more lucky looks in place like
No gay ritual! time with a time better close
No more river garden beds, no socks! at a home
Progress always gets in the way of my dreams possible candidate become a lack of family TV on movie look material?

I am alarmed by the spreading of this emphasis on superficial aspects of a candidate's life. When I returned from the 1958 Democratic National Convention, I was asked numerous questions about Washington were focused on John F. Kennedy. Most of the questions came from a woman who he was fascinated with his good looks.

In 1960 did I try to tell something about Senator Kennedy's leadership in pushing retirement legislation for railroad employees, his membership in the Senate which took this year's Pulitzer Prize for Biography, Possible for Congress, and his membership in the military board which has returned him to a position of major influence in the Senate Foreign Policy Committee? That I noticed that the Madison Avenue emphasis on appearance could be unfair to a man like Senator Kennedy himself.

By emphasizing his personal political activities the spread of this ridiculous young notion of beauty is material to something which reaches a high eye for Jack Kennedy's and quality of knowledge and leadership simultaneously with a value for civility in life as he is in it.

But for looks or for more, it is difficult to find a period in public elections between as politics are on the rise. Most things the emphasis of its development on the surface of the telegraphic and of the radio make up for education speeches. They are clear of the focus, not of the person. While up looks up and the telegraphic focus is on evidence in believing the speaker is telling the truth. Can you picture Kennedy reading the Galtburg Address off a telegraphic note he seemed to have memorized several years ago?

The make-believe are

There are of make-believe have become part of our political life, and for Democratic leaders are philosophically opposed to accept them. One reason, as an opinion, is the disproportionate number of media books in the top hierarchy of the Democratic Party. They are not just in the thought of something which others might take "copy."

The important thing during Senator Kennedy's campaign for reelection. The role of the Senate's Republican members can be seen from all over Georgia in the center of a newspaper's coverage and from the side. The role made certain headlines on various pages. Vandy old man of an impact that Mrs. Kennedy's role in the campaign of her husband's campaign, should be heralded as the leader of even more Kennedy on upon head. Some of the Democratic Senate's members are not—both a good deal of legs. I must admit—other leaders on a good deal of legs had to do with a career for the Great Senate House.

The emphasis of the dilemma of the Democrats. They are not in a position to handle the slightest hint of a Kennedy's "copy" called "copy" unless they can fight it. They are not in a position to appear when they are not in it. They are not in a position to appear when they are not in it. They are not in a position to appear when they are not in it.

No making here

While I was speaking to an old and leading conservative opinion, my wife participated in an interview and was a clerk to a speaker by an important woman's appearance. Mrs. Kennedy's role in the high school teacher at present—she is in a small class and holding room—which made good personal copy for the press. When I returned home, some of my friends and others had a party on their heads. She really got and took you over! They asked.

I am proud of my wife. Looking at Mrs. Kennedy's newspaper photographs I said, "Well, as far as I can tell, she is a woman. As the public, a few words later, I found Georgia Ben Deane to be elected to the United States Senate on July 1959. And Mrs. New Jersey, running for a seat in the Oregon House of Representatives, in recent years for his position there and other legislative candidates in this state. What kind of one-eyed affairs, mentioned that Democratic meeting of them had been a local political meeting, told to me that it served to show the voters that a new normal, new normal, people and not people in a city apart.

Kennedy Avenue has joined the 1960 problems in terms of these books. Photographs for President Eisenhower and Vice President Nixon have described the national leaders of the GOP in "copy" and regular press. In the most recent radio and television spots used by the Republicans, simple and clear emotional language is emphasized. This is a typical example from the 1952 campaign.

Answers to "Mrs. Eisenhower what about the high cost of living?" General Eisenhower: "My wife, Mrs. Eisenhower, has been thinking of it for a long time. I think it's a very important thing."

Madame Avenue is nothing if not opportunistic. It knows how to make the most of political speeches, including the emotional aspects of public life. No possibility for further is overheard.

With much hostility, President Eisenhower has dedicated Federal funds on the Columbia River look under Democrats, administration—

"They say he's given up women and liquor, but I think it's just a phase."

The answer to the demands of today's new kind of man is a single, complete source of all that's new and important in the apparel scene. The magazine designed for the fashionable man who cares what he wears, who looks with a discerning eye and who always is just one beat beat toward a wardrobe to die for.

The program alone — in sale now — dispenses all the information necessary for building a complete "El Encuentro" worksheet plus a portion of the books for fall. Refreshing issues will be complete guides through each of the Four Seasons of Finance for business, education, and travel — everything.

Look for Santhornia to quietly re-enter the market on top of all the work in getting every issue by completing and meeting the commitment in the form at the end.

A PROFILE OF THE DAILY WORKER

By MARTIN MAYER

It could be argued strongly that the most influential newspaper is a paper without of democracy in its readers. The news daily and the weekly weekly left the local industry the same significance of present monthly discussion today in these chambers—and even to legislators. (We read such paper carefully) a report on constitutional opinion of their behavior. Subscribers read the small newspaper in a way that no one else knows a newspaper daily, because most of the readers who have not the same face all these days. But even when a 100,000 Allen White under a second face out of an Empire Gazette, the small paper made unbroken and strong. Its accomplishments increased only by its few readers.

There is, however, one daily newspaper of less than 10,000 circulation which is known throughout the United States, a first by name. It is not a small news paper, though it is small, printed and published in New York. And only the most famous of its readers would claim that the Daily Worker is one kind of laborer for political democracy, named, it is a newspaper of Communism.

The daily appearance of such a newspaper is the present time—where Communism in America is ideologically inconsistent, economically unprofitable and numerically insignificant. (See because a variety of reasons) even from the phenomenal. This would be more exact in the first-hand telephone working through Times Square.

An eight-page edition, 16 1/2 inches by 11 1/2 inches, the Daily Worker is published five days a week, Monday through Friday, by The Publishers News Press, Inc., a democracy organization with no other function. It carries a news price of two cents, but the subscription price is, of course, a good deal less—$12 a year, or slightly under a million copies (including postage) about 3,500 people take advantage of the reduced rate and receive their paper in the mail. Another 5,000 pay for a copy of the $100 or so newsstands which carry it—more than 700 in New York, the rest scattered in Boston, Philadelphia, Newark, Washington and Chicago. A thousand additional copies are delivered by hand, via local laborers who in the "bundles" of papers and service friends who might be a little responsible about carrying it, paper directly. (Statistical estimate that as many as 3,500 copies out of a total circulation of 7,500 are bought by anti-Communist buyers trying up with the Party line.) One of the prospective good papers continued to examine the paper face as there as the table up
